The Time: Christmas 1183

The Place: Henry's Castle at Chinon, France

Act I: Scene 1: In the bedroom of Alais Capet

Scene 2: A Reception Hall immediately following

Scene 3: Eleanor's chamber - a short time later

Scene 4: The Reception Hall again

Scene 5: Eleanor's chamber - not long afterwards

Scene 6: Philip's chamber - immediately following

Act II: Scene 1: Henry's chamber - shortly later

Scene 2: Alais chamber - early the next morning

Scene 3: The Wine Cellar - immediately following

The historical material on Henry's reign is considerable insofar as battles, plots, wars, treaties and alliances are concerned. This play – while simplifying the political maneuvering combining a meeting of the French and English Kings in 1183 with a Royal Court held at Windsor in the following year into a Christmas Court that never was – is accurately based on the available data.

The facts we have, while clear enough as to the outcome of the relationships – such things as who kills who and when – say little if anything about the quality and content of those relationships. The people in this play, their character and passions, while consistent with the facts we have, are fictitious.

The play, finally, contains anachronisms in speech, thought, habit, custom and so on. Those the author is aware of – the way, for instance, Christmas is celebrated – are deliberate and not intended to outrage the historical aspects of the script.
